Dogs + skis = "skijoring"

It's easy, inexpensive and a great way to have fun with your dog this winter. Skijoring, from the Norwegian for "ski driving," is gaining popularity in American ski country. Dogs need to be over 35 pounds, so not every pooch is eligible (sorry, Chihuahuas!) Humans need cross country skis, a harness, a tether with a bungee-like connecting cord, and a waist belt.

"For me it's as close to heaven as you can possibly get---cross country skiing combined with dog mushing," says John Thompson of Shoreview, Minn., who skijors with his Alaskan huskies, Timber and Kiska. Best of all, it allows a dog and owner to exercise together outdoors in cold weather rather than sit in front of the TV.

Thompson's Web site, Skijornow.com, is one of several devoted to this growing sport. For a list of dog-friendly skijoring spots, see xcski.org, the site of the Cross Country Ski Areas Association.

PUPPY PROTECTION ACT

Submitted by Michelle VeuCasovic

AKC today issued an updated alert related to the "so-called puppy protection act.

Lead negotiators of the House/Senate Farm Bill Conference issued a statement late yesterday indicating that they expect work on the final farm bill to be completed the week of April 9th.

Please, even if you have previously called to oppose this bill, fax or call again! It is imperative to continue to do this. Numbers count. Please read the AKC's link below and act.
